We Eye The World...

As our country faces the problem of racial discrimination, we, as Christian students in pursuit of truth, find ourselves involved in a situation that begs for an understanding of the duties and obligations which we owe to our fellow man. Knowledge of certain facts, principles, and ideas leads us to this understanding. Here are several excerpts from different sources which should give the Christian insight into his moral as well as human obligations.

In discussing the Church's position on the racial question, certain fundamental truths about justice and love which She is trying to impress on us all.

Racial segregation is morally wrong and sinful because it is basically a violation of the dictates of justice and an attempt to degrade human personality. . . . Such indignities arc grievous violations of Christian justice and charity, which cannot be justified in this modern age of enlightenment and broadly proclaimed democracy.

Most Rev. Joseph Francis Rummel, Archbishop of New Orleans

I guess it is easy for those who have never felt the stinging darts of segregation to say wait. But ... when you suddenly have your very existence threatened and your speech stammering as you seek to explain to your six-year-old daughter why she can't go to the public amusement park that has increased almost twenty per cent since 1961 alone! The cry for more room and more equipment can be heard by regular students, summer students, and the faculty. Even my upper bimonth classes are overcrowded in the labs. Room 102 literally gives the impression that when all is said and done, bunsen burners aflame, twenty microscopes, twenty anxious students, and books, books, books, help.

Despite this and the other problems which all departments must have, the element which determines the quality of the education is the spirit and love of learning which is shared by the students and faculty. In science courses the lecture method is a necessity due to the vast amount of factual material which must be learned. Ordinarily we train our students to keep up-to-date, while the quest for more room and more equipment goes on. Amid this, and I think that I can speak for most of the biology majors, we are getting one of the finest educations to be had in our field in both its liberal and technological aspects. Besides, the smell of formaldinehyde isn't all THAT bad.

Leaders Pose Question:

“What Is a Student”?

The concept: STUDENT

The question: WHAT SHE IS, WHAT SHE DOES.

Identifying both the concept and the question at the first student body assembly of the year, Walter V. Swidzinski, Oct. 25, was a panel of four seniors.

Participants were Susan Burke, student body president; Jan Copuzelo, Student Council vice-chairman; Janet Cupoletto, Angelicus editor; and Mary Crosby, Sodality vice-president.

Sue Burke opened the discussion with a definition of the student and her challenge.

“This is the definition of a student: one who encounters difficult concepts with a real tenor in his mental powers and, moving in and out, regarding the problems with a critical perspective, he ships away at vagueness until he can be satisfied in the fruit of his labors—the joy of the student—the confrontation of truth.”

Student Unity

Moving from the philosophy of “student” into the student’s role in the world was the task of Ann Polk’s discussion. Although Anne introduced such international unions as IUS and ISC, special focus was accorded NSA, National Student Association, of which Barry College is a member.

“NSA has searched for its proper place in our society since its founding. . . . It has attempted to bring to the student the meaning of his position and has tried to instill its importance in him, for education is in the basis of a successful democratic society.”

“Through Congresses and conventions—which provide an opportunity for contact between interested students, NSA has tried to convince students of this country that they should think about and evaluate their curricular, their extra-curricular activities, and their college living experiences.”

College Living

The art of college living pertinent to Barry was presented by Jan Copuzelo.

“The concept of dedicated creative citizenship, as applied to student government, penetrates the entire structure of our campus. Chose tag it spirits; clubsunately divide it; and the Sister searches for it in the responding eyes of her student. In short: the evidence of good citizenship must be as ubiquitous as the most ministering guardian...”

“A student, our approach must be a sophisticated one. We must depend on our observation of the world and participate in its daily challenges. Such an attitude would help make college a place where student isContours and legislation.”

Catholic Vision

Mary Crosby concluded the presentation by unifying student experience with spiritual life.

“... Catholic educators and more and more college students are realizing we must be in communion with something of a vision as well as a degree... This vision is a Christian view of oneself, one’s neighbor, and environment. And we are the light of such a vision because, as potential graduates of a Catholic College, we represent the end result of the best the Catholic Church in America can offer in the way of education...”

Summing up for the panel was Sue Burke.

“There are challenges in studentship. And we seek always in every activity, to fulfill the idea of a student. The essential ingredient in such an endeavor is student initiative. This is the life blood of every organization and every activity on campus. They all depend on you individually.”

The Freshman Class is the topic of most Barry-socially-orientated conversations. The New Faces breed interest from all.

The upperclassmen are amazed that so many freshmen resemble past Barry girls. Have you seen these look-alikes... Janice Laroche, Margo O'Connor; Patti Cannon, Marcia Bynye; Judy Ryan, and Jacki Julianos.

The most perfect sister-combination to hit the campus is Ruth Kocanda, sister of last year's campus queen, Candy Kocanda. Surprised upperclassmen remarked, "I could have sworn I heard Candy's voice. Is she sick?"

Sports-wise, the class has a good tennis player — why not challenge Drusila Gutierrez to a match? Horsewomen Chickie Salat and Sue Berry even have their own horses!

And volks, see, look out for Sandy Gomlin and Barbara Howell. Both have beautiful tones.

On top of all that, Freshman day-hop, Barbara Horoats, is a semi-finalist in the Miss Teenage Miami Contest. Lots of luck!

The Juniors are sponsoring a WORD OF THE DAY game to increase their vocabulary. Just check their bulletin board in Regina Casa if you'd like to play along. The object is to use the word posted as many times during the day as you can, thus filing it in your memory for future use.

Congrats to the speech dept. on the BCSC. It's a fine idea and going well.

Don't complain about sunny Florida's tropical storms... the sprinklers are working. At least you know from which direction the rain is coming. You can never tell with the sprinklers!

Sister Leaves Us

"The practice of Christian virtue requires a degree of fortitude. If the world hates you, our Lord said 'know it hatred me before it hated you.'"

She spoke to us of hope:

"I pray then, that you will have the courage which re- fuses to compromise with the world. As a Catholic young woman, baptized and confirmed, you carry with you all the graces needed for the public confession of your faith. Face the world then, without hesitation or fear. Face it with hope and love."

And, most of all, she gave us the promises faith brings:

"Make an earnest effort now always to see God's hand in all that comes into your lives. Your faith will enable you to see that this combination of light and darkness is God's method of strengthening you and of keeping you close to Him."

A long time ago circumstances kept Barry students from saying farewell, things will keep us apart from sending Sister Mary Alice a continual and collective prayer of our appreciation.

DEAR LITTLE SISTER

Welcome to Barry! Each year the arrival of the fresh- men brings an atmosphere of anxiety and youthfulness to the campus. Through your ac- tive anticipation and extreme nervousness, the Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors see them­ selves in you... your stumbles and falls were our own just a few years ago. Sincerely, then, with you in mind, every upperclassman is anxious to help you make the necessary adjustment to college life.

And you will find college life different from your high school career. As a result, college challenges you to learn through a new method. At Barry, words of knowledge are opened to you by your teachers, but individually you must gather the knowledge you need through research, experiments, trials and error.

Socially, you are on your own. A new way of life evolves as you learn to live in close contact with all types of people. No mother and father to turn to when the chips are down; none of your old friends to lighten the burden. But new friends will replace the old, and lasting friendships are found at Barry.

Spiritually, Barry offers every opportunity for living a rewarding life. The chapel doors are never closed to you. Religion will supplement your academic and social gains to fulfill your every need.

So as you begin your four years at Barry, a new light shines on your spiritual, aca­ demic, and social life. And be­ fore you realize it, little sister, you'll be a Barry woman.

Love and prayers.

The Upperclassmen

DEAR UPPERCLASSMEN

When we Freshmen, the Class of 1967, descended on Barry College campus Septem­ ber 11, we arrived with mixed feel­ ings. Some were hopeful, others sad and still others, rebellious. Now that we have had time to settle down and start becoming college women, we impress our impressions of this new way of life are undoubtedly exactly what Barry College hoped they would be.

Barry is wonderful... the general exclamation. The fac­ ulty seems to have had the insight of knowing just what we would need and marvelous­ ly provide it. The counselors for food and faculty were the best.

Hello Sr. Dorothy

Our school specializes in the special interests of the field of education which is the teaching of religious education. We are dedicated to all our upperclassmen. As the Student Council President, Susan Burke, said at the first annual assembly, "Barry — the College Beautiful!" is not only a beautiful college−but also has beautiful buildings, but it is also one of beautiful people."

Sincerely,
Joleen Gonzalez
