Merry Christmas Everyone

May Joy Be Yours Throughout the Year

From the Angelicus Staff
Plan Special Christmas T. V.
With Christmas around the corner, many people are planning to spend some of their time in front of the family television. Four programs to be shown during the Christmas vacation are:

- Christ Is Born, a saga of Western men recreating the Nativity scene. This program is Wednesday, Dec. 7, 8-9 p.m. It will be repeated on Dec. 25 from 4-5 p.m.
- Christmas Memory, Truman Capote's drama starring Geraldine Page and Donnie Melvin. It can be seen Wednesday, Dec. 21 at 10-11 p.m.
- L'Enfance du Christ, Hector Berlioz' oratorio-trilogy on the French classic with choreography by Valerie Bettis. This program is Sunday, Dec. 25 at 1-2 p.m.
- A Christmas Memory, in the spring of 1967 and graduate students or alumni.

Mr. Ogden plans his meals a week in advance. He uses a great deal of variety in this planning, selecting recipes from institutional cook books and U.S. Navy recipes. He insists that recipes are a necessity when cooking for a large number of people.

Mr. Ogden, who has never missed a day's work, suffers from very sore shins, the result of climbing onto Santa's knee. He says that he has never missed a day's work. When both the lollipop and the contours of the photographer's Yogi Bear toy fail to quiet their fears, nervous mothers and fathers try their own psychology. Some coax with oohs and ahhs, some threaten, others try showing their offerings — "Come on now, there are no cowards in our family" came from one determined father. Still others resign themselves to tear-stained pictures for the family albums.

Santa Claus diagnoses as a tired frontier the other eleven months of the year. He is a slim man who fills out his red suit with a healthy pillow. His beard is cleaned every night as it frequently is the target for dirty faced kittens and sticky lollipops.

Sister Paul, who is helping with the business of Pixie Photos, reports that this is her husband's first experience as the jolly old man. She says that he suffers from very sore shins, the recipients of many unintentional kicks and also must treat his arm muscles every night because he lifts thousands of children daily.

Sister Paul says it's all worth it because of the sincerity of most of the children. Some are skeptical, he admits, but most express themselves with complete faith. They know Santa will come down the chimney or through the Florida rooms to bring trains or baby dolls.

Pixie Photos does not do business with children alone. Wives and girlfriends have their pictures taken with Santa, as have the children who loved ones in the service as do the grandkids for their grandchildren. Maybe the sincerity ofbelief is missing but the spirit is still there.

Guess Where?

Two of the many Christmas decorations on campus show the festive cheer of the season. The above are displayed in common places probably unrecognizable to the public. The first is in Sister Marie Siesta's office and the second is in Mr. Cook's creation in the Post Office.

What American Christmas Means To a Thai Freshman

By Sheila Weathersbee

She doesn't have many muscles and she probably can't drive a truck, but her name is Sam.

Suchinda Osataphan was given the nickname by her roomate's father when she spent some time with Charlene Puma and her family before classes began in September.

"When I introduced myself, Mr. Puma decided that he would call me Sam. Ever since then the name has just sort of stuck," explains Barry's freshman from Thailand.

Youngest of Ten

Sam, who is nineteen years old, was born in Chiangmai, the second major city of Thailand. She is the youngest of a family of ten, five boys and five girls. Her father passed away when she was only ten years old. She and her mother now live in Bangkok with one of her sisters, Mrs. Vorarat Kulsretsiri, who was born in Chiangmai, the homeland of her own private, personal devotion, she explains. She has had to study the Christian religion throughout her education and it has never interfered with the practice of her own faith.

Enjoys Christmas

She has always been exposed to Christkindl's most celebrated feast, Christmas. Sam admits that she has gotten caught up in the excitement of Santa Claus, Jingle Bells, and all the festivities. One year she gave a Christmas card and gifts to her mother. "She wasn't too pleased with it, but she appreciated it.

The Thai's celebrate New Year's much the same way we do in America. This is different than on the Buddhists, who are back, right now Sam thinks she will return to her homeland but there is a definite hint that at the end of four years she might want to stay in the United States.

Knows Americans

There have been no shocks or disappointments in Sam's first meeting with Americans. She explains that there are a lot less strict than they are at home by jet.

Clothes and American boys are about the same type.

Sam had to get permission from her parents to single date until the parents see fit.

Parents see fit.

Modern Thailand

Although Sam is a follower of Buddhism, the national religion of Thailand, she has been educated in nothing but Christian schools. "I was in the States. In her homeland, couples are not allowed to single date until the parents see fit.

We go to parties in Thailand and not out alone. The customs are a lot less strict than they used to be though.

Daling Is Allowed

Sam admits that her mother was against dating but she realized that this was not the accepted thing in America and she gave her consent. Sam herself is not interested in too much dating although she has gone out with fellows she has met at the campus dances.

Sam comes from a closely knit family and she says that she writes them one or twice a week. Sometimes a couple of weeks lapse between letters before she receives one from home, however.

Sam is unable to publicly practice her religion while she is in America. She says that there is a Buddhist temple up north but she does not know of one in the area. This does not hinder her own private, personal devotion, she explains. She has had to study the Christian religion throughout her education and it has never interfered with the practice of her own faith.

Colleage Talk

Donnie Warwick had committees at Siena College in Loudonville, New York, nervously pacing the floor when she appeared just 25 minutes before her scheduled concert. "Wow! I'm surprised, this is the first time I've ever performed in this area, and returned with a 'catch' of starfish, fire coral, jelly fish, and live and dead dollars programs. I'm just thrilled the star, but she nevertheless charmed the Siena crowd.

In bathing suits and beach towels, biology students at Florida Atlantic University at Boca Raton took a field trip aboard the "Reward II" recently, and returned with a 'catch' of starfish, fire coral, jelly fish, and live and dead dollars programs. I'm just thrilled the star, but she nevertheless charmed the Siena crowd.

Imagine the disilllusionment at Miami-Dade Junior College when a studios dictionary fan discovered that the college's beloved mascot, the falcon, is the vrilie masculine bird, but the female member of the species. Unfortunately, the college is sponsoring a contest to adopt a new mascot.

"Clovies for Kids" was the theme of Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity's holiday party for the Variety Children's Hospital. The University of Miami Greeks donated tickets to the entertainment children, and distributed Christmas gifts among the children.

At Xavier University, in Cincinnati, Ohio, comes news of their second mascot show, A Portrait of Shakespeare, featuring a king of the Shrew, Julius Caesar, Macbeth, and A Midsummer Night's Dream.

From Indiana University in Bloomington, sixty students were chosen as "senators" to vote on Red Cross blood drives. They also voted on Red Cross's plans to go to school for four years majoring in business. Sam, wearing her native costume, enjoys her life at Barry. She was recently elected as social chairman of the freshman class.

That Thanksgiving Pie Is Really Yuletide Custom

The mince meat pie that you thought was the traditional dessert for Thanksgiving, is really an Old English Christmas custom that found its beginning with the crusaders.

After trips to the Holy Lands, the crusaders would return to England with all sorts of Oriental spices. It then followed that Jesus’ birth should be celebrated with a pie containing all the spices of His native land.

The first pies would seem a little unappealing to today’s taste. The ingredients usually included a mixture of pears, orange, raisins, and of course the spices from the Holy Land.

A later 17th century version is more like our mince meat pies of today, with chopped chicken, eggs, raisins and sugar. It was not only a part of an Old English feast, but also part of a Puritan’s Christmas.

The shape of the mince meat pie has not always been circular around edges, leaving 1 inch over bottom crust and pressing under edge to form a rim. Roast top crust. Pour fruit juice in between the two crusts. Bake 30 minutes. Serve warm.

There’s a Lot More To Journalism Than Just Reporting

When Giustina Misuraca turned in her copy on the mince meat pie feature story, her assignment was just beginning.

At six o’clock in the morning the next day, Gus reported to the college kitchens to bake the pie she had written about. The future women’s page editor who has combined her home economics major course with a journalism minor knew that like all good food editors, she had to try out the recipe herself before publishing it.

With a minimum number of the kitchen staff on hand to observe her, Gus took command of Mr. Ogden’s bakery. A grip of panic took hold when she realized that all measuring utensils were for quantity cooking, that is, the regular home measuring cups were not available. All Gus had to use were large measuring utensils for institutional cooking.

A short hit-and-miss search throughout the kitchens brought small measuring cups for her use.

By eight o’clock that morning, a pie was baked and a recipe proven. It even had the tasty approval of the campus chef, the photographer, a major professor, a few interested faculty members and “some discrimi­nate friends.”

That Turkey Pie

Most on Friday has become a controversy on campus.

Father Juranko commented on the new papal decree and said, “There is no longer an ecclesiastical obligation for Catholics to abstain from meat on Friday, but we still should since the spirit behind the law still prevails.”

This original spirit began as a penance because Christ sacrificed for us on Friday by dying on the cross.

“The meat is not the only thing to obtain from,” Father continued, “and now is our chance to be creative and more mature about doing things on our own. It is not even necessary to use Friday, we can choose our own moments.”

The obligation of abstaining is gone and with it the Friday stigma for Catholics. Now they don’t have to feel guilty of any sin if they do eat meat on Friday. The church fathers do encourage those who still might continue this practice, but it is more of a personal obligation.

As Father Burke said, “It would be more of a sacrifice now and since we are under obligation to do some penance it is better not to eat meat on Friday.”

The necessity of penance was stated from Christ himself, when one wishes to come after me let him deny himself.”

Custom green, a small creche, miniature Christmas trees make a delightfully warm Christmas scene.

Wire hangers, Christmas decorations, and some extra time — these are the ingredients necessary in making original Christmas hanging planters. These planters are an idea for decorating rooms, dorms, homes or for parties.

All that is needed to make the planters are twenty hangers, ribbon, Christmas balls, green hankie or any available Christmas decorations.

First, spray the twenty hangers evenly with a green hankie, bright red Christmas balls, red satin ribbon create a simple but beautiful Christmas planter.

Use Hangers For Christmas Decorations

A child’s delight! A Christmas planter made of green hankie, red and white miniature candy canes, as a jolly old Saint Nick candy sucker.

Threatening to work that way.

Select holly, cotton or any other suitable material and the props needed such as red birds, Santa Claus, or an miniature canoe. Make definite plans for your interior and exterior decorative theme before you begin. Be imaginative in decorating the planters by using Christmas balls or candy cane to hang on the hanger hook by putting Christmas light on it. Arrange and wire the materials to the central pole with invisible piano wire and attach the hooks of the hangers evenly so that there is equal space between each of the twenty hang­ers. Take the wire and wrap it around the hanger hook and so on until you reach the starting point. The wire serves to hold the hanger hooks in position uniformly and permanently.

Now that the planter is complete all that is left is to select the proper planter to hang it. A hanging chandelier or a curtain rod or any other place that needs a Christmas decoration would be suitable.
